The Office of Diversity, Inclusion, & Equity/Title IX is committed to collaborating, improving, and moving forward on ways to assist the MGA campus community in continuing to express its commitment to diversity. As this is a continuous effort that takes the support of the campus community, stay tuned for more information on ways you can engage and contribute to the work. Across the country, we've seen a push for more equitable and inclusive communities – and now, more than ever, that's needed in our public spaces, in our mobility options, and in the ways we engage locally. To create a city that's designed for inclusivity and connectedness, we need innovative ideas from our young people. The Emerging City Champions program is seeking talented young people who are committed to their communities and would benefit from training, support and wider networks to advance their work and their roles as leaders. The fellowship is currently accepting applications from young civic innovators (ages 19-35) in the 26 vested communities who have bold ideas to build welcoming and resilient communities.

In addition to being a Gen Z or millennial innovator, other application criteria include: Projects must take place in or benefit one of the 26 communities listed. Ideas must be carried out within a year and with a $5,000 budget. Projects must address public space, mobility or civic engagement.

The application deadline is Sunday, July 12, 2020. To apply, visit emergingcitychampions.org. Please spread the word about this incredible opportunity as we work to make a difference in Macon.

WHAT IS TITLE IX?

Title IX is a federal law, enacted in 1972, stating that no person on the basis of sex shall be “excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any education program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance.”

As we work and learn together, let us all support a campus culture of respect by remaining mindful of MGA's current compliance policies that promote respectful behavior.

Non-discrimination
